Environment Board Announces Annual Environmental Awards

In awarding its Annual Evanston Environmental Stewardship Awards, the Environment Board plans to celebrate the 37th anniversary of Earth Day (April 22) by calling attention to Evanstonians who are modeling good environmental stewardship. Join us on Monday, April 23 at 8:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at the Civic Center, 2100 Ridge Ave., Evanston.

This year's award winners are:

Julie Hamos

In recognition of environmental leadership with legislative initiatives, transportation issues, environmental vision, and support for the City of Evanston's new office of sustainability.

Julia Carroll

In recognition of environmental leadership with the City of Evanston strategic plan; support of the U.S. Mayor's Climate Protection Agreement; and commitment to a sustainable Evanston.

Dave Cook

In recognition of the environmental initiatives he has instituted in City of Evanston facilities; work on the new franchise agreement; and commitment to sustainability.

Joel Freeman

In recognition of the environmental leadership he has demonstrated with his work on the Evanston Energy Commission, the Network for Evanston's Future, and Evanston's Energy Future.

Nathan Kipnis

In recognition of the environmental leadership he has demonstrated with architectural design, community environmental advocacy, and the innovative work of Nathan Kipnis Architects, Inc.

The Evanston RoundTable

In recognition of their journalistic approach to the environment, support of community environmental issues, events and initiatives, and a commitment to a green future for Evanston
